New York State Assemblywoman Christine Pellegrino

and

Suffolk County Legislator Kara Hahn

Are Hosting

#MeToo Movement Founder, Tarana Burke

On Sunday, January 28

At Stony Brook University

Join Us to Say #LIToo

Help us to bring the strength of the international and national #MeToo movement to our local area uniting legislative, business, non-profit and cultural organizations working towards building greater support for the safety and empowerment for all women and girls, as well as the issues that affect women and girls living and working on Long Island.

Founder of the #MeToo Movement, Tarana Burke, has worked with young people and victims of sexual abuse for over 25 years. Promoting empowerment through empathy, the #MeToo movement triggered a national outcry over sexual assault and harassment this year. In fact, Time Magazine named the Silence Breakers as their 2017 Person of the Year.

We are truly grateful to be able to bring the leader of this movement with her experience, her powerful voice and her strength to Long Island as we kick-off a task force that will unite all of us in creating initiatives, legislation, trainings, and events throughout this year and beyond, as we work to strengthen Long Island's commitment to standing with all women and girls.

Event Details

Sunday, January 28, 2018

Student Leaders Breakfast

9:00-10:00 am

Student Leaders from Stony Brook University will have breakfast with Tarana Burke to discuss how they can drive these issues on campus and off-campus as they join our Long Island workforce.

Legislators Round Table

10:15 am-12:00 pm

Legislators from across Long Island will join together in a roundtable discussion with Tarana Burke to learn how they can better advocate and legislate on issues that affect women.

Sponsors Lunch

12:15-1:45 pm

Join our local legislators and co-sponsors for a private lunch with Tarana Burke celebrating your commitment to these important issues, as we network and further develop ideas on how we can most effectively continue our work through our new 10x10x10 Initiative.

Public Forum

2:00-3:30 pm

Exemplifying our commitment to bringing these discussions to the public, we will host a discussion with Tarana Burke led by past and present participating girls in i-tri, as we talk about how we can empower young people and all people to make cultural and social changes. (Tickets are free with a suggested donation of $25 per ticket)

Long-Range Goals

It is important to note that this program is not just about raising awareness, but is equally focused on taking action. As you may be aware, Stony Brook University is involved in the UN Women's program #HeForShe as one of only 10 universities from around the world that joined together with 10 governments and 10 corporations to drive gender equality issues and solutions. This year's focus is specifically violence against women.

As part of our Long Island #MeToo event, we will model Long Island's 10x10x10 Initiative on this international program, bringing it to our local area. 10 local governments/legislators, 10 youth-based programs, schools and universities, and 10 Long Island-based companies will be selected to drive awareness and launch programs/legislation that can be shared and replicated throughout Long Island, as we all work to create a safer and more equitable community for women to live and work in. More details about this initiative and how you can get involved will be shared at our sponsors lunch.

Sponsorships Opportunities

Your sponsorship of this event will fund this entire day, as we not only celebrate the #MeToo movement here on Long Island, but we also build a long-lasting path of cultural, social and legislative changes that truly seek to improve the lives of women across Long Island.
